

on Wilder's Pulitzer Prize-winning drama Our Town has become a basic fixture of classic American theater since its opening night in 1938, and once television entered on the scene, it wasn't long before the play was broadcast. The 1956 TV production boasted musical numbers by Sammy Cahn and James Van Heusen, including the perky but sensible "Love and Marriage. Introduced by Frank Sinatra, the song went straight to the heart of every viewer and later became the first popular song to win an Emmy Award. Its healthy, homespun sentiments also won it the religious Christopher Award. Play it and you'll understand why.
